BLANKIE.

ELEANOR, 8 years old, with her blankie.

ELEANOR

So I love you.

Cuz I’ve had you forever.

Since eight years ago when I was born.

Eight years is a really long time to have something.

But Dad says we’re moving and I hate Dad cuz we’re moving and also cuz I just hate Dad cuz he says we have to pack things away for good cuz it’s a smaller house…

But really cuz I’m a grown up older girl now.

Like second grade.

You know?

But no matter where I’ve gone you’ve always been there.

Every night when we go to sleep. And the car rides and the airplanes and the sick times and the hospital.

But when you grow up to second grade…and you have to move…

I have to pack you away.

And I’m not sure at the new house I’ll unpack you.

But maybe someday. When I’m older. I’ll say hi again.

I can always say hi again.

Cuz the future’s always there.

So if my breath gets kinda raspy and my eyes get kinda moisty and my body gets really hurty…

I’m so sorry.
ELEANOR [CONT.]
Please remember how much I loved you.

Please don’t be mad.

Goodbye.

END OF PLAY.
GOODBYE, GOD.

A woman, 60s.

She stands before a trash can.

She opens the trash can.

She removes from her purse, or pocket, a picture of a human face.

She holds the picture carefully, stares at it, wincing at the sight, almost unable to look at it in full, the face wounding her.

She then brings the picture to her heart, holding it there for a beat, caressing it.

She then unclasps from her neck a chain, long and golden.

We see at the bottom of the chain is a cross.

She holds the cross over the trashcan, a fierce look, sickened and angry, hands trembling.

She lets go of the cross and it falls into the trashcan.

She closes the trashcan.

Holding the picture, she goes to off.

END OF PLAY.

PAUL

ART

And you think you can make it without me.

PAUL

It’s my songwriting.

END OF PLAY.
ZOO.

RHONDA, 20s, surrounded by a number of people.

As RHONDA talks the people each exit the stage on their own accord.

By the end RHONDA is alone, the last of the people having exited the stage.

RHONDA
Motherfucker broke up with me at the zoo. Believe that? Just now, right here at the zoo, in front of this ferret-looking thing, the otter, whatever, the zoo! Calling me hostile. Believe that? ‘I feel you’re a little hostile.’ I was like we both swiped right, yeah? So we go out. This three days ago, fancy dinner, his idea. Before we sit down I told him what I tell all them swipe-right hustlers, I tell him: I am the slayer of men. Anyone can swipe right but in this world you gotta swipe left first, you gotta break up with them before they break up with you. So he’s like ‘maybe this isn’t a good idea’ and I’m like sit your ass down and order us some cheese fritters. So he was quiet after that, mostly listening cuz I’m a master conversationalist, I am awesome at talking, and he just moved here for some job and didn’t know anybody, quiet like that, so a couple days later I was ready to swipe left, break it off first, eliminate him forever but he goes ‘the zoo.’ And I’m like, huh, that’s different, none of them other hustlers bothered to come up with something original like that, so we get here, in front of this zebra or emu-looking thing and before I say a word he’s like ‘I’m worried you’re too hostile for me’ and I’m like sit your ass down and rethink yourself cuz you can’t leave this kind of love that easy, oh sorry, we had sex, I tell you that?, after the fancy dinner, it was fine and all, I mean a little bumpy in the backseat of his car and he was like wincing the whole time, just unable to deal with the power, and I’m like what?, you never had a woman talk you through the whole thing?, but here he was just now saying ‘I feel safe doing this in a public space’ and then rolls. Like why would you even meet me like this, why would you do that? You wanna get slayed in a public place by me? You wanna face that threat? You wanna put yourself in range of the power? I will swipe left your sorry ass off this entire planet, don’t you ever do that to me! Damn. You believe that?

END OF PLAY.
